Is Drip the True Endgame?

MRGRANOLA ASKS

A player shouldn't hunt hundreds of hours for a shiny only to keep wearing Pallet Town starter clothes. How important is your avatar's style compared to your collection? Is "drip" the true endgame of PokéMMO?

EPOK (ARCEUS) ANSWERS

Your outfit is just as important as your shinies. I see the follower sprite "slot" as a cosmetic as well. Even though I wear relatively basic outfits, it's important that my character has a distinct look.

Finding that special outfit is an important part of someone's journey. It's also cool because more people will recognize you out when you're shiny hunting.

The Shunter & Tycoon Fit

MRGRANOLA ASKS

If you designed an outfit for Vanity Magazine representing a true shiny hunter or market tycoon, which pieces, colors or accessories are essential?

EPOK (ARCEUS) ANSWERS

A mixture of rare/expensive items plus a cool shiny follower sprite. Red Unity + Wishmaker robes is one of the greatest-looking combos in the game, plus THE ELECTRIC STORM hair (easy to swap for something cheaper with the same effect). The kitsune mask goes well with the whole fit: elegance, while also being cool. If I saw this guy as a new player, I'd think he's what I aspire to be.

Exclusive vs. Accessible

MRGRANOLA ASKS

Fashion is subjective and we don't focus on prices. Still, does the exclusivity of expensive cosmetics limit creativity, or is there room to stand out with accessible items?

EPOK (ARCEUS) ANSWERS

There are a lot of cool cheap items in this game. Many players prefer the flaming demon skulls to the original flaming skulls, and they cost like 1000x less. My main outfit only costs a few mil, apart from the war wings; before I had them I wore stuff like mage's staff, candy cane and black collared cape.

Exclusive items are good for MMOs: they give people something aspirational to work towards. I'm glad they're adding more limited hair items, since for a long time ESTORM was the only one, and it would cost billions.

The Most Underrated

MRGRANOLA ASKS

If we translated the PokéMMO "iceberg" into a fashion iceberg, what is the most underrated clothing item or combination the community overlooks?

FRONT BACK SIDE

No. 1 · SNOWMAN HOOD / OUTFIT

An old item with a cute walking animation, one of the best they updated over time. The body item just looks so clean, and I hardly ever see other people wearing it. The top looks insanely clean with black gloves and a collared cape.

No. 2 · ROCKSTAR + RED HAIR

Combining Rockstar with red hair so it looks like a strand is across the side of your face is one of my favorites.
